3D Printing:

3D printing (or additive manufacturing, AM) is one of various processes used to make a three-dimensional object. In 3D printing, additive processes are used, in which successive layers of material are laid down under computer control. These objects can be of any shape or geometry and are produced from a 3D model or other electronic data source. A 3D printer is a type of industrial robot. 3D printing, in terms of original sense, refers to a processes that sequentially deposits material onto a powder bed with inkjet printer heads. More recently the meaning of the term has expanded to encompass a wider variety of techniques such as extrusion and sintering based processes. Technical standards generally use the term additive manufacturing in broader sense.

3D printing is not just a fancy technology anymore. It will impact our lives in a big way and drastically solve many problems of our society and multiple disciplines. Apart from manufacturing, the most defining impact we have seen till now is in healthcare and education. Soon, 3D printing will be an integral part of the main-stream technologies and will be used by large number of consumers. It's our duty and responsibility to use this technology for the good of mankind and prevent its misuse. It's time to embrace and learn even more about 3D printing.
