What is 3D Internet?

3D Internet is the next generation after the current 2dweb. 3D Internet consists of inter connected services, presented as virtual worlds. Imagine a set- up of inter connected virtual worlds inhabited by users who can visit and consume services through "teleporting "from one world to another. 3DInternet will rely on the same basic technology and components as that of a traditional browser and it will interact with the same search engines and servers. Aside from the use of 3D computer graphics and personalized avatars, the important difference Much more social experience compared to the two-dimensional Internet of today. 3DInternet is incredibly social. If you're reading a document, you can see other people reading the same document. You connect organically with other people that share your interests and consume the same services that you do.

3D Internet, also known as virtual worlds, is a powerful new way for you to reach consumers, business customers, co-workers, partners, and students. It combines the immediacy of television, the versatile content of the Web, and the relationship-building strengths of social networking sites like Face book.

Yet unlike the passive experience of television, the 3D Internet is inherently interactive and engaging. Virtual worlds provide immersive 3D experiences that replicate (and in some cases exceed) real life.

People who take part in virtual worlds stay online longer with a heightened level of interest. To take advantage of that interest, diverse businesses and organizations have claimed an early stake in this fast-growing market.

They include technology leaders such as IBM, Microsoft, and Cisco, companies such as BMW, Toyota, Circuit City, Coca Cola, and Calvin Klein, and scores of universities, including Harvard, Stanford and.
